WELCOME TO LETCHWORTH GARDEN CITY

A WARM WELCOME TO LETCHWORTH THE WORLD'S FIRST GARDEN CITY

The idea of a Garden City — which balanced the best of town and country living — was conceived by Ebenezer Howard in his groundbreaking book, “Garden Cities of To-morrow.” This book became the blueprint for Letchworth Garden City. Its legacy can be seen in garden cities and new towns across the world, but Letchworth is universally recognised as the world’s First Garden City. Architects Barry Parker and Raymond Unwin created the masterplan and designed the town from the architect’s office which still stands on Norton Way South.

Today, Letchworth Garden City is a vibrant and thriving town which strives to keep Ebenezer’s legacy alive as the first and finest example of planned town and country living.

Discover more about modern day Letchworth in this guide, brought to you by Letchworth Garden City Heritage Foundation and Letchworth Business Improvement District.
